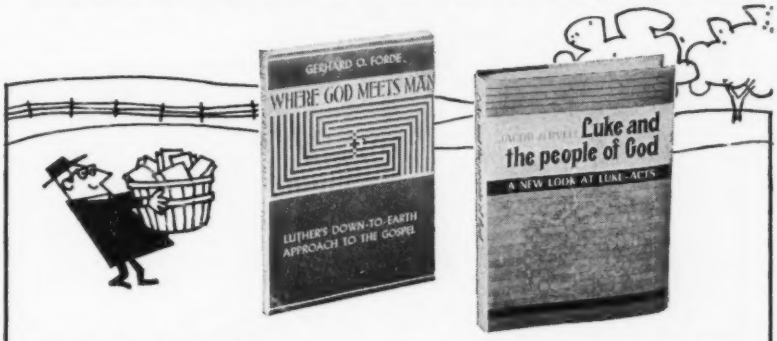
God-centered ideas for today's man



WHERE GOD MEETS MAN
Idea: Is there an answer for those who can no longer agree with much of "traditional" theology or the modern substitutes? Gerhard Forde suggests a reacquaintance with Martin Luther's down-to-earth theology for help in living a Christian life here and now. $2.95 Oct. 2

LUKE & THE PEOPLE OF GOD
Idea: Two theories persist about Luke—that he represents the institutional church and that he writes for Gentiles. Jacob Jervell challenges these theories, mounting biblical evidence and stimulating a re-examination of Luke's theology. cloth $8.50 Oct. 2

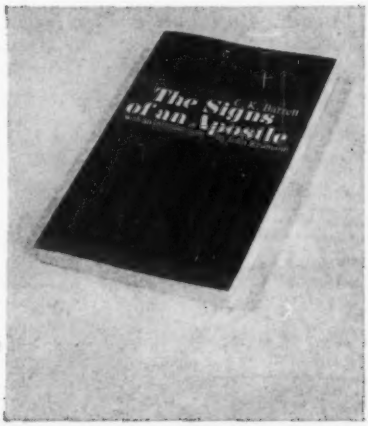
THE SIGNS OF AN APOSTLE



by C. K. Barrett

What did it mean to be an apostle in New Testament times? What does it mean today? C. K. Barrett, a Methodist minister and a noted New Testament scholar, brings a refreshing perspective to this subject. Describing who the apostles were and what they did, the author relates them to later Christian leaders, including Paul. He moves to the marks of an apostolic church today showing how a church's apostolicity is reflected in its faith and preaching, life and order. Pastors and laymen alike will appreciate Barrett's vital approach to the church, both past and present.

ESCHATOLOGY IN LUKE

by E. Earle Ellis

This essay fits well into current inquiry about eschatology in general and about Luke's place in early Christianity. Ellis outlines the problems a scholar meets when researching Lukan material. He then surveys existing theories about Luke's eschatology, particularly those of Hans Conzelmann and Helmut Flender. Pointing out difficulties in their ideas, Ellis offers an alternate interpretation which stresses present and future aspects in Luke. $1.00 paper

BEGINNING AND END IN THE BIBLE

by Claus Westermann

Claus Westermann delves into a subject often overlooked by biblical scholars—the relation between the beginning and end of the Bible. The author shows that these two parts not only constitute a framework for biblical material, but also have many features in common. In a close scrutiny of Genesis 1-11 and the Book of Revelation, Westermann analyzes the two sections in terms of structure, speech patterns, and theology. He offers significant evidence that Genesis and Revelation should be the basis of interpretation for the central parts of the Bible.
